Santa Barbara and Ventura Counties prepare for Winter Storm

- Santa Barbara County Office of Emergency Management (OEM) held a conference call today with the Ventura Operational Area (OA) and State partners. At this point, the primary concern is for Tuesday in the Solimar Beach burn area. Anticipated rainfall could meet or exceed the USGS threshold of 1/2 " per hour, which could cause debris flow in the burn areas. Caltrans and the Coastal Resource Corporation (CRC) have deployed K-rail barriers to the most vulnerable locations and will have equipment pre-staged. There is still the possibility that US Highway 101 and/or the Pacific Coast Highway (PCH) could be negatively impacted, causing impact to the OA. It is not yet known if the anticipated impact will result in voluntary evacuations in the Solimar and Faria residential areas. Santa Barbara OEM will coordinate closely with Santa Barbara County Public Works and Fire Department.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

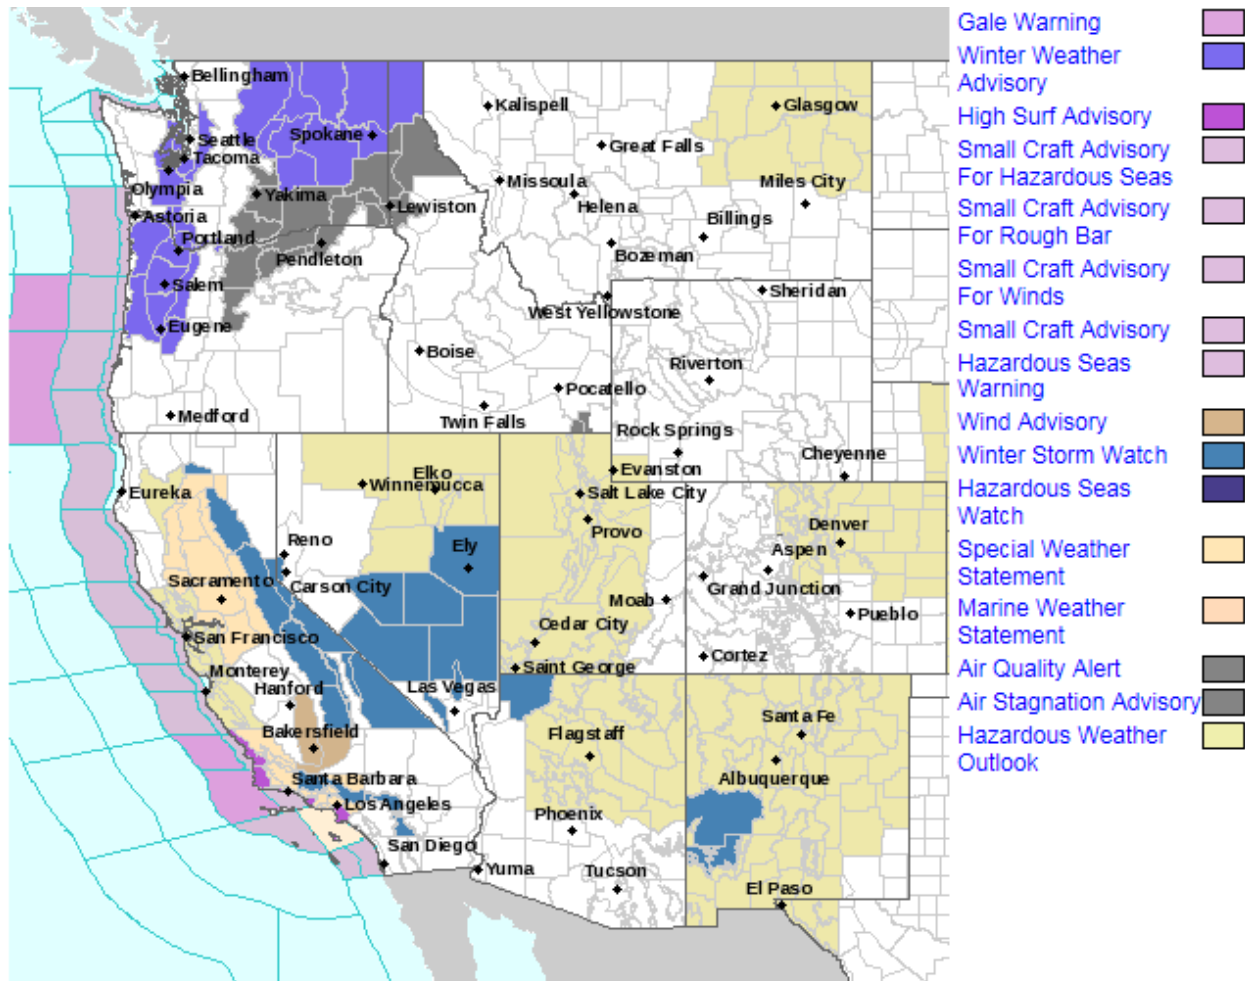

A series of storms will move through this week, with a weak system today, followed by a stronger system Monday night through Tuesday. This storm will bring accumulating snow to the mountains and rain to the Valley. Another storm will bring more rain and mountain snow Wednesday. More systems will move through late in the week as the unsettled pattern continues.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A series of storm systems are expected to impact southwestern California beginning today and lasting through Friday. The first storm is expected to move across the area this afternoon into Monday, bringing some rain and mountain snow above 5500 feet. A stronger storm is forecasted for the area on Tuesday, when there will be widespread rain and mountain snow above 6000 feet. Significant snow of 1 to 2 feet with strong winds could create winter storm conditions above 7000 feet. The Tuesday system will also bring the potential for brief higher intensity rainfall rates which could bring the threat of flash flooding and debris flows in recent burn areas. Additional storms will likely impact the region between Wednesday and Friday. These appear to be colder systems with snow levels potentially falling to around 4000 feet at times possibly impacting Interstate 5 near the Grapevine. There will also be the potential for brief heavy downpours and isolated thunderstorms later in the week. Periods of gusty winds through next week will bring the potential for downed trees and power outages.
